With reference to the treatment of asbestos victims such as myself, I would like to share some thoughts with you.

It seems that interpetation of a law only applies when it is advantagous to those power, influence and money. If the interpetation isn't an advantage, then find another one.

Our judges are not to set precedence by going off in another direction when courted by lobby groups who do not want to go along with the intent of the current law. Their job is to enforce it, not subvert the intent.

If victims of asbestosis are not rightly receiving compensation, the companies involved have the right to a court trial before damages are awarded.

I would like to see our judges perform their duties as specified by law and not interfere with other facets of our government.

Thank you for the opportunity to express my opinion
